Decorate A Dog Tag

Although dogs cannot tell us their name and information about themselves, their collar tags can tell us a lot about their personality and character. Below is a blank dog tag shaped like a bone. Write your name and one important fact about yourself on the tag and then decorate it based on your personality (favorite color, activities you like to do, etc.).

Once you have finished decorating your dog tag, cut it out and punch a hole at the top. You can put a string through the hole and wear it around your neck or hang it up somewhere at home.

Crafting the Collection

The sculpture Bono was created by Fan Yu and represents a running Havanese. The artwork was commissioned by the Museum to honor the real Bono, a Havanese who has won the most dog show awards for his breed as of 2020.

In this sculpture, Fan Yu has created a great movement in Bono despite being a motionless statue. The hair on Bono is whipping backwards at sharp angles and the dog's little feet seem to be soaring in midair.

Artists, like Fan Yu, find ways to create lots of motion and energy in artwork that physically is still. In the box below draw a picture of your favorite dog breed in action. What kind of body language, details, and setting can you include in your picture that can communicate energy and motion?

How did you create motion in your drawing? Explain three different details you included to create energy in your dog.

Dog Breed: Bedlington Terrier
Artwork: Ch. Lancelot of Rowanoaks and Ch. Tyneside Taraleeds
Artist: Edwin Megargee
Fun Fact: Although they look and act like sheep today, Bedlington Terriers were originally bred to keep rats out of coal mines in England.

Dog Breed: Brussels Griffon
Artwork: Toy, a Brussels Griffon
Artist: Amable Bouillier
Fun Fact: Brussels Griffons can be self-conscious around strangers.

Dog Breed: Scottish Terrier
Artwork: Barney and Miss Beazley at the Whitehouse
Artist: Constance Coleman
Fun Fact: Franklin D. Roosevelt had a Scottish Terrier named Fala who supposedly received more fan mail than most presidents.

Dog Breed: Irish Setter
Artwork: The Red Setter
Artist: Reuben Ward Binks
Fun Fact: Ancestors of the Irish Setter were not all red, but actually red and white.
